

The Passy Press®

Letter to the Editor

From: George Cadwalader <g-ycad@undisclosed.net>
To: Nicolas Gardiner enpg@thepassypress.com
Date: October 12, 2012
Subject: Letters to the Editor: Essay by George Brokow

Dear Sir,

The writer of the first pamphlet is dead wrong.

To the extent that his criticism of Obama's overuse of executive power is valid, the reason he (Obama) has been forced to do so is because of the paralysis in the House and Senate intentionally brought about by a radical Republican fringe willing to put the good of the United States second to their own hyper partisan agenda. If you doubt this, look no further than at this lunatic group's willingness to risk the Country's credit rating.

So I hope you won't jeopardize the launching of the Passy Press by providing a platform for this drivel. There are plenty of valid issues that need reasoned debate and attacks on Obama based on the scurrilous claim that he is hell bent on undermining the Constitution isn't one of them. This stuff doesn't "illuminate." It only feeds into the kind of populist hysteria that the Republicans, backed by huge amounts of money, have so skilfully exploited to screw the very people whose votes they court with distortions such as the ones you've just published.

The real risk to our country is that we become an oligarchy in which a minuscule minority of men like the Koch brothers wield disproportionate enough influence as to effectively disenfranchise the rest of us. Write about that.

George Cadwalader

George Cadwalader is a former officer of Marines, educator, lobsterman and writer of fiction and non-fiction.